The FAQ states the following, related to "What kind of questions should I not ask here?": I'm looking for technical advice, and I think this site can help me. If the answer was not meant to be an answer to the question, but merely a link to a website, wouldn't it be out of place to answer the question? A: That's one thing I like about this site. We don't dismiss questions because of their content. If the question itself is appropriate here, then it will be answered, regardless of the content of the question, said. The main thing is we don't let them at board. On the other hand, when those shoes are worn, the gaiters—that's what we do. Our show is based on showmanship. You're known for having a very successful "horsy" side. I would point to Sir Edmund Hillary's words, "When I am no longer able to ride I would like to be surrounded by those with whom I rode." I would say that for the next 100 years, you're going to be king of those. I've always liked to work with people. I've never enjoyed being the boss. We have been lucky with a lot of our riders. I always say, "If you want to be a fly on the wall, you always want to be at the top of the list." You've got to be able to work with people to make things happen.
